LANDS AND MILLS FOR SALE.

THE subscribers offer for sale the well know Red Bank 12, 4,000 acres, more or less, lying on both sides of Lumber River, on the main road from Lumberton. to Floral College, seventeen miles from the former, and seven from the latter place, also, on the main road from Harlleesville, S. C., to Fayetteville, thirty-three miles south of the latter place.—They feel no hesitation in saying that said plantation possesses as many conveniences and advantages as any ever offered for sale in this section of the State. There is now on the premises and in successful operation, a saw mill running two saws, and a grist mill, and cotton gin. All of which are run upon the best and most improved plans. The home demand for lumber is always great, with the additional advantage of transporting it by the river to Georgetown, S. C., and the intermediate landings.

Timber for the use of the mill is plentiful. The grist mill and cotton gin have each a fine custom. LANDS AND MILLS FOR SALE.

and cotton gin have each a fine custom. The lands are, generally, heavily timbered, and being on and near the river, are very valuable for turpentine, ton timber, &c. Turpentine can always be sold at a fair price in Lumberton; and timber at Georgetown and the steam mills on the river

There are about 500 acres of cleared land, under goo fence, and in a high state of cultivation, well adapted to the various articles of produce usually raised in this latitude.

The dwelling house is large and comfortable. The negro cabins are all frame work; well lighted and ventilated, brick chimney and shingle roofs; most of them have been erected within the last five years.

The corn and fodder houses, stable buildings, &c., are mostly new and well located. The location is healthy. The water, both well and spring, is excellent.

There is also upon the premises a large store house onefourth of a mile from the dwelling, a Presbyterian Church one mile, and a Methodist Church two miles. The store house is in a public place. The stand, for selling goods and making good debts, is equal to any in the State. There is regular service in both Churches, by ministers of their respective denominations.

Persons desiring further information, can address the subscribers at Gilopoliss or examine the premises. Preference will be given to any one buying the whole, or it will be divi

The crowd on the occasion was immense. In waiting with dilated eyes and sars pricked up to eateh every note of scandal that floated on the teeming atmosphere, were citizens of every degree—sturdy yeomen and perfumed beaux, finery gallants that love the smell of muslin, attorneys and counsellors, and liquerish old gentlement with standing shirt callars and double chins.

All the unwashed regulations of the city were there, and gazed at her as at some fierce and untasseable beast, caged for their especial entertainment. The target of a thousand eyes, and stared at worse than the sengledon, or any other monstrosity, her wit and self-possession did not forsake her. Seeing what a full house she was drawing, she naively remarked that the officers of the law had made a great mistake in not having. the law had made a great mistake in not having tickets of admission at dollars a head.

The first witness called, on the part of the State, was Mr. George T. Rowe, the prosecutor. He tes-tified that on the night of the 8th inst., in his capacity of "prompter" in the Varieties Theatre, he went into the prompter's box for the purpose of preparing for Miss Ducy Barry's Dance. Lola came in and crowded close to him. He asked her to go away. She then gave him a blow with her right hand and kicked him. Mr. Henning (Lola's agent) being called by her to her assistance, he came and taking the witness by the throat, choked him, and took the wind out of him!" Witness went to Mr. Thomas Placide, the manager of the Theatre, who on being consulted advised the witness to have Lola arrested. The noise made during the difficulty, brought a very large crowd into the alley way-Witness being asked whether he had not kicked Lola previous to her assault upon him, stated positive-

A lady witness was called, who stated that Lola, on the night in question, had told her that Mr. Rowe had kicked her (the Countess) and showed the mark of the blow above her ankle. There was a red spot on the limb larger than a dollar, which appeared to have been made by the heel of a boot. The spot was considerably inflamed and remained there the next day and afterwards. Here there was laughter that shook the house. Mr. Thomas Placide was next called. He stated that Lola, on a certain occasion, had called him a "liar, a scoundrel, and a thief," ("and so you are yet," interrupted Lola.) whereat the multitude was moved to laughter and cachinated exceedingly. (By the way, Lola, in stating that Rowe had kicked her, sarcastically remarked that she had indeed been kicked by a horse, but never before by a donkey.)

Mr. Placide knew nothing pertinent to the issue, and after stating that Lola, by her engagement, at his Theatre, had made four dollars to his one, retired. ed. There were several sharp passages of wit between Mr. Placide and Lola, wherein Lola generally got the advantage and carried away the sympa-thies of the crowd. On several occasions the delight of the audience rose to such a pitch that they applauded outright.—
Even the judge himself could not retain his risibles, and blind eyed justice unraveled his solemn visage to the extent of a broad and good humored grin.

The Recorder concluded the case by sending the defendant for trial before the First District Court.—

The bond for the appearance of the Countess to answer the charge was named by the court at one thousand dollars, but at the suggestion of her council, William Hall, Esq., that the charge was frivolous and that Mr. Rowe had been injured neither in hair nor hide, the amount was fixed at five hundred dollars only. Bail was furnished, and the Countess. after being stared out of countenance, retired, bearing with her the sympathies of the larger portion of

In conclusion, we wish to say that we do not desire to be misunderstood about this convention as Commissioners of Navigation for the next twelve matter. Now and always, we shall, so far as in us lies, uphold the action of conventions, regularly called, as we felt it our duty to do last summer, in case of our county convention, which was called by a large primary meeting, of which notice had beer given for at least six weeks beforehand. Not a word, at the point when, if opposition existed, it should have been shown and would have been strictly in order, which it was not after the convention had been called, after it had met and after it had acted. To any convention so called, in County, District, State or Union, we shall give our acquiscence and support; but if, for reasons which may appear satisfactory to our judgment, we deem the holding of a convention inexpedient, we shall oppose the calling of it. A merchant stated that so long as the mining and other citizens of California pursued the course they did towards the Indians, he expected to hear of Indian troubles. The atrocities said to have been committed on the Indians by the whites were of the most revolting character, and unbecoming a civilized people; and little more ado was made about slaving an Indian than there would be about killing a cayote or Mexican wolf. Nearly every offence committed by an Indian had been made capital. If he stole any property even food to keep him from starving, and happend to be caught, he died by the rifle or the halter. If a miner was found killed by a stray Indian, straightway a whole Indian encampment would be destroyed, including the massacre of men, women, and children, and attested the fury and strength of their hostility. Great Increase of our Steam Marine. It is an axiom that " nations understand but two anguages, war and commerce;" and if this be true. hen as the world is now constituted, commerce has become the mighty mediator between nations, wielding the destinies of mankind, causing them to rush on terious fluctuations of its intensely studied barometer, and anxiously look for its world-influencing dictum, from which there can be no appeal.

For the last six years the United States have in reased their facilities for trade and commerce to a greater extent than any other nation upon the earth. within the same space of time; and now, with sail and steam, possess a mercantile marine more extensive than that of all other nations in the world put together. Great Britain excepted. Upon their masts the starspangled banner is seen in every quarter of the habitable globe, bringing to us, from the remotest points. new sources of wealth, comfort, usefulness, and en joyment. The following article from the Scientific American will give our readers some good idea upon

The United States of America presents the most extraordinary spectacle of rapid progress in greatness that they have injured the slave to an extent and power of any nation that has ever existed. There into fruitful fields, and lonely deserts into teeming ciies, and that with a facility and power akin to the skill ascribed to the old alchymists, in whose magic hands iron became gold, and brass shining silver. With a most wonderful increase of cities, villages, and everything connected with industrial progress on land, o less wonderful has been our progress on sea-in building ships and subduing the winds and waves by he mighty power of steam. Six years ago there were only two mercantile steamships in the whole United tates; these belonged to New York, and were but insignificant in size. Then we had no mail steamships, and the star-spangled banner had never floated but in solitary instance in a foreign port above the quarterdeck of an American steamer. The smoke from A merican funnels never was seen afar on the ocean, and in this respect England alone reigned mistress of the seas. But what a change has taken place in that short period! The four largest and as yet the fleetest ocean steamships in the world belong to our country, and the rivers Mersey, in England, the Seine and Wesser, in France and Germany, are now visited regularly by eight American steamships of large tonnage, and powerful engines. The two mail steamships Washington and Hermann, which ply between New-York and Bremen, are 1,700 tons burden each; the two which ply between New York and Havre—the Franklin and Humboldt-are 2,200 tons each; and the four of Collins's line of steamships are each 3,000 tons burden, making an Atlantic fleet of steamships amounting to 19,800 tons burden. On this day six years ago, not one of these vessels had disturbed the waters of the great deep. Besides these noble vessels, there are seventeen

The act under which free negroes coming transiently within the borders of South Carolina are confined during their stay there, is a strictly defensive measure. Her internal safety is thought he her to demand it; and a foreign Government has, it seems to us, just as much right to say that the authorities of Charleston shall not exercise the police right to confine a subject with an infection in a hospital, or the right of quarantine, as to demand that free negro subject, visiting that port shall go at large, if the State decides that his presence jeopards the peace and safety of the community. South Carolina claims and exercises the right to exclude or imprison free negro citizens of her sister States though these, as citizens of other States, can plead the express immunity of the Federal Constitu and we do not see how a foreign State can claim peculiar privileges for a peculiar class of people which are denied to a like class of our own States; for the law of self-preservation overrides the pro-tection pleaded in both cases. In, however, yielding to South Carolina the benefit of the argument growing out of the first law of nature and nations. we have always thought that she exercised her right with an unnecessary stringency, and indis-criminating rigor, not called for by the motive and object of her legislation. The Girard Will Case.

The Philadelphia Bulletin reports the opinion Judge Grier, in the United States Circuit Court, denying the application for a new trial in the case of the heirs of Stephen Girard vs. the City of Philadelphia, in which the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiffs. The question involved was whether, under the laws of Pennsylvania, a will devising all the real estate of the testator conveys to the devisee lands purchased by the testator after the will is executed. The court has decided that it does not. Judge Grier says:

"The reason why after-purchased lands do not pass y a will, even though the testator has exposed cleary his wish or intention that they should, is not because such a purchase is a revocation of the will, but because a will is in the nature of a conveyance or an appointment of a particular estate, and consequently the testator must have the power to dispose at the time the will is executed. Hence a devise of land, though it operates in futuro, can pass only such interest or estate as the testator had at the time, and continued to have till his decease. Like a grant of all a man's estate and interest without warranty or convenant of title, it is no estoppel against the grantor or his heir.

"Thus if a man having an equitable estate in land levise it, and afterward purchase the legal title, the latter will descend to his heir; but equity will not hold him as a trustee for the divisee of the equitable or usufructory estate. On the contrary, if the testator have but the legal estate at the time he makes his will, and afterwards purchases the equitable estate, the devisee of the legal estate will be held as trustee for the heir to whom the after-purchased equitable estate descends. There is no extinguishment of the after-purchased title for the sake of enlarging the devise and the heir is not estopped from avering that the devisee took just such estate or title as the testator had at the date of the execution of his will. Nor can the distinction taken by the learned counsel between title and estate avail to establish a difference in the present case. A man who has neither possession nor right has no estate in the land. He who has nothing can convey nothing."

This is evidently the true explanation of the cause of the ephemeral popularity of this collection of fictions and calumny. The Democrat very justly remarks that Mrs. Stowe has not been invited to England in consequence of the talent she displayed in wilting her book. Other writers, far more worthy of public respect, have visited England and have been althey had never written a line.

The New York, Christian Observer, the leading organ of the religious denomination to which Mrs. on fire, was broken to pieces, and its contents passed Stowe belongs, closes its able review of her novel in the following forcible language.

"The work is, to say the least of it, a smutty story; quite too familar with the kitchen, and the parlor of the debauchee, and the numerous yellow mistresses who have the honor of presiding in their midnight scenes of corruption."

Another prominent editor adds: "We have always considered it a very doubtful book, disgraceful to its author, and a libel upon the country.

The Annoyances of Poverty. It is either Mr. Raymond himself, of the New York Times, or some equally capable hand, that throws off occasionaly a capital thing; the subjects, chosen at random, are clothed in terse and familar language, and commend themselves to the reader's attention, by an agreeable quaintness of style and an admirable moral one. Here is one of them:

It is one of the worst annovances of poverty that it debars a man from many privileges which, at first glance, seem to be exclusively his. Revealing his determination to marry, to her as one in whom he could confide, she set herself to work to help him to accomplish his purpose. Conning over her lady acquaintances, for a moment, in her mind, she soon settled upon one whom she considered suitable. She immediately called upon her, invited her home with her, which invitation was accepted, and after introducing her to her brother, left them to themselves. The merchant abruptly declared his wish, and popped the question as calmly and coolly as if presenting a bill to a customer. On the morning of the twenty-first day of our p ordered the force pump to be manned, and went back to the cabin, where Capt. W. and the passengers were at breakfast. He communicated the fact to the Captain, and they both left without any suspicions being excited as to the cause. After breakfast I went upon deck, and the unusual stir on the forecastle attracting my attention, I went forward, and soon learned the cause—the ship was on fire, in the cargo, comewhere it was supposed between the second and third decks; but how extensive the fire was could not be immedilowed to pass their time us quietly in London as though ately ascertained. A hole was cut through the deck, and a stream of water from the force pump. which William C. The ship was then turned head to the land; we were 450 miles from it. The magazine was hoisted upon the upper deck, and placed where it could be easily thrown overboard; the life boats got out and the provisions and water, and the clothing which we would need till we could reach the land, made ready. At this time another large opening was made, and a box, upon the deck. Another and another were broken up in the same manner, till a place was made large enough to admit one of the sailors, who boldly went down with the hose in his hand. He directed it against the burning mass, till he fell exhausted upon the floor. He was dragged out, and another, as bold as he, came to his place. In a moment or two he fell, like his companion, and was dragged out insensible, and carried upon the deck. Another and another took his place and shared his fate. For four hours we labored in this way, and you may imagine the terrors of our position. We could but fear that the strength of the men, self-sacrificing as they were, would not hold on till the flames were extinguished. Some of them could do no more, and these the hardiest of them all. We toiled on, however-the passengers, gentlemen and ladies, working the pumps-for another hour, when the joyful news seen, no more smoke arose. We began to breathe freely, and hope that deliverance had been sent to us. After the rest of an hour an examination was made, but no signs of fire was discovered. New Mexico

Late accounts from New Mexico bring information of a state of things tending almost inevitably to collisions between the American authorities of the territory of New Mexico, one of our recent acquisitions under the provisions of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and the Mexican authorities of the neighbouring State of Chihuahua. Gov. Lane, of New Mexico, has issued his Proclamation, claiming the Mecilla Valley, which was left in the State of Chihuahua, by, as he alleges, a palpable error of Mr. Bartlett. our late Boundary Commissioner. The territory is described, in the Proclamation, as "a portion of territory on the West side of the Rio Grande del Norte, thirty-four miles wide, by one Bread was in fair demand-Watson's Pilot 18s. hundred and seventy-eight miles long, be the same Crackers 1s.; market bare. The Proclamation sets forth that, inasmuch as the present revolutionary condition of the Mexican Republic precludes the hope of adequate protection being afforded by that Republic to the inhabitants of this disputed territory for the time being : and a large portion of the inhabitants now claim the protection of the United States, and solicit the re-annexation of their territory to New Mexico, favorable tenor of the Baltic's advices, the demand more in the making than in the stuff." f om which it was illegally wrested by Chihuahua, the Governor requires all civil and military officers of the United States, and the territory of New Mex- the week comprised 60,000 bales, of which speculaico, whom it may concern, to execute the laws of the United States and the territory of New Mexico. in and over the territory aforesaid, which is provi sionally attached to and made a part of the county of Dona Anna, in the territory of New Mexico.

Gov. Lane, called upon Col. Sumner, in command of the U. S. troops in New Mexico, for the aid of the military under his command to take possession of the country. This aid Col. S refused to give, and the Mexicans immediately occupied the disputed territory with all the troops they could raise, and have sent to the city of Chihuahua for more. The Mexican force consists of about 100 regulars and 125 national guard or militia. Of course the American militia of New Mexico, if called out, could easily take and hold the territory, against any force that the Mexicans in their of Chihuahua, has issued a counter proclamation, in answer to that of Gov. But something was to happen besides this "Uncle Tomerie." In the crowd I saw a young couple who were waiting out of more than mere curiosity. You could see that by the eye of the girl. The young man also watched the ladies as they came out, but evidently his care was the girl. At last a lady issued from the door -a tall, handsome woman, with fine aristocratic features, bold yet delicate; a very voluptuous countenance, if the sensuous look had not been rendered harsh by a slight habitual sneer of scorn, very common with English people of "high birth," her face being also, if it is not rude to say so, a little hardened by time She must have been a glorious creature, and she looked to think herself still so. She was in no hurry—haste would have spoiled her costume. I wish I could describe it, but hat would need a less republican pen than mine. Her noble throat rose out of a wide expanse of delicate and brilliant silk, softened with a large white shawl and a variety of lace, or whatever else it was; but the taste of arrangement disposed the mass o soft strips so as to display, and not to disguise, the grace of her tall and rather slender figure.

A poiceman came forward to remove the girl; and my blood boiled to see a fellow in a glazed hat attempt to touch a female; but the lady herself stopped him In the British House of Commons, a question was with a wave of her hand. The girl repeated what asked whether the interests of England and the she said, but I did not hear it. The lady looked a few words to the footman-a fine gentleman, in a lovely, delicate, blue coat, with white gloves, and cheeks like a girl's-the carriage drove off. The young man looked for an instant into my

We ran barely a mile, and then we arrived at the door of a poor house, in a small street, before the carriage. With a passionate burst of tears, the girl dashed the clanking purse upon the ground, and then kneeling to the dying woman, whom her grief startled from the apathy of death, she cast her arms over her, and cried: "Forgive me, Jessy-my darling Jessy: I could not he'p it, dear; I would not bear that offered to me here, by your bedside. Get better, dear, for he will come : and do not till me that I killed you by my wicked thoughtlesness."

Jessy's faint lips moved with a smile that died in coming. The girl laid her head upon her friend, and gently sobbed.
"For Heaven's sake try to calm her," said La

Julia to Bertrand: "I will go to fetch him. I will bring him myself." She left the room with a head less proudly lifted than when she entered it; but I thought her face looked far more beautiful in its downcast tears than when it was confronting the public gaze in the great portico. Bertrand, who is a young Frenchman, bred in England, told me the whole story; but there is a little more to add. We left Jessy to die alone with the father of her dead child, who was honorably brought back to her. And some atonement has been made to Anna, her friend. I think she had the subscription meant for "Uncle Tom," many times multiplied: but that did not, truth makes me McKoy. confess, rein her tongue when she found that Jessy could no longer be disturbed by the reproach showered upon the recreant lover. I must confess, too, that he boldly did his duty in undergoing the pennance; which I believe few of these demoralised and which it relieved Anna's heart to inflict. Also, he did duty in attending as mourner when we burried Jessy. But how much better if he had thought of his penance before; how much better if those well-meaning, easy-going reformers, who set up to teach us in America how to put the world to rights at a blow, would think of the path by which their luxuries reach their own dainty selves! How many Jessys, each following the other as she perishes, it takes to clothe one Lady Julia through all the seasons she enjoys!
